Introduction

Access Center Information with the Turn of a Page or a Click of the Mouse

Since Neighborhood Networks was launched in 1995, the family of multiservice technology centers has grown to nearly 1,500 centers nationwide. To help center staff and stakeholders locate and network with fellow centers across the nation, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) created the Neighborhood Networks Directory, a comprehensive contact list of every operational Neighborhood Networks center. In addition to making center-to-center communication easier, the Neighborhood Networks Directory also serves as a useful reference tool for partners and potential partners who seek to collaborate with centers and expand their community outreach efforts.

In 2009, the Neighborhood Networks Directory was expanded to become a two-piece resource. These components include:

- Printed 2009 Neighborhood Networks Directory. The printed 2009 Neighborhood Networks Directory includes a color-coded map of United States indicating the 10 HUD regions and the number of Neighborhood Networks centers in each region. From there, the publication is divided by HUD region with the states in the region appearing alphabetically. Neighborhood Networks centers in each state are listed alphabetically. Centers that have achieved advanced levels of center classification —Model (M) and Certified (C)—are noted.
- Online Center Database. The second component of the Neighborhood Networks Directory is the online database located on the Neighborhood Networks Web site at www.NeighborhoodNetworks.org. Updated regularly to ensure that the latest center information is on file and available, the online database allows users to search for centers by state, alphabetically, chronological date of center opening, and Neighborhood Networks center classification level. The database also provides a list of Neighborhood Networks consortia and identifies the centers that belong to each consortium. A list of HUD Neighborhood Networks Coordinators and HUD Headquarters staff and their contact information are also provided in the online database.

The Neighborhood Networks Directory and online database helps centers tap into resources and expand their professional network.
